

Communication books (Non-powered AAC)

A communication book includes a picture-based vocabulary system. These can be photographs, symbols or a mix of both.

Communication books can vary in size and complexity to support a wide range of communication needs.

Vocabulary is typically organised by topics (e.g. clothes, food, actions) but may also be organised alphabetically depending on the user's skills and preferences.

Communication books typically include a focus on core vocabulary, as well as topic-specific words. Vocabulary should be relevant and important to the individual. Communication books are highly personalised.

The individual may use their communication book by using direct access (e.g. pointing with their finger) or eye gaze.
